John H. Kelly III of the Convair aerospace staff will discuss "The Soviet Missile and Space Program," at a membership meeting of the Chamber of Commerce at noon Tuesday.

As coordinator for technical information for Convair division of General Dynamics corporation he is responsible for the analysis of weapon development trends in Russia as well as other foreign countries and the United States. He helps with advanced engineering planning for Convair, builder of the Atlas missile for which bases are now under construction around Spokane.

Convair Since 1956

He also will be guest speaker at a meeting of the Advertising and Sales Association of Spokane at noon Wednesday at the Ritz-Carlton hotel.

Kelly has a master's degree in Soviet and Far East studies from the University of Michigan and has taken additional courses at Duke and Purdue universities in electronic and aeronautical engineering.

He joined Convair in 1956 as a senior research engineer. Before going with Convair he was a staff intelligence officer with the central intelligence agency in Washington, D. C.
